Who are they? What have they DONE?

St. Jude (a.k.a. Judith Milhon) is a legendary pioneering hacker. She was a member of the founding gang and was Cyber Pranks editor of Mondo 2000. A contributing writer for Wired and Future Sex magazines, she cowrote Mondo 2000: A User's Guide to the New Edge and Cyberpunk Handbook. She's a lifelong troublemaker and UNIX programmer, the first identified female hacker (in Stephen Levy's book Hackers), and inventor of the term cyberpunk. She appeared as herself as a smartdrugs SM witch in Ruby Wax's Spiritual Quest for the BBC, writes "The Fifth Column" for The Net magazine, and comments to the media on cyberspace.

R. U. Sirius (a.k.a. Ken Goffman) is cofounder and former editor in chief of the legendary cyberculture magazine Mondo 2000. He coauthored Mondo 2000: A User's Guide to the New Edge and cowrote Cyberpunk Handbook. He is also a contributing writer with Wired, an associate editor with Boing Boing and IO magazines, a regular columnist for Artforum International and Japan Esquire, and has written articles in such publications as the San Francisco Chronicle and Whole Earth Review. He lectures worldwide and has appeared on national television shows, including Donahue and MTV's Buzz. His band, MV inc. (formerly Mondo Vanilli), has been confusing record labels for several years. He appeared as himself in the films Virtual Love and Twists of the Wire.

They are known...

Mondo 2000 was a revolutionary magazine. Newsweek called it "an idea time bomb," and Entertainment Weekly saluted it as "a shimmering glimpse of a weird new world...A gulp of roiling mad-scientist potion, a blast-off into next-century cyberspace that will squish your face into an accelerated grimace."

Details called Sirius's previous book, Mondo 2000: A User's Guide to the New Edge, "a technicolor introduction to the oncoming Digital Millennium...the indispensable road map to a movement Sirius describes as 'an attempt to evolve a new species through a marriage of humans and technology.'"

A phenomenon awaits...
